

Jaycee Dugard Found After 18 Years

Husband-and-Wife Suspects in Custody; Husband a Registered Sex Offender

By SARAH NETTER and SABINA GHEBREMEDHIN

LOS ANGELES Aug. 27, 2009

A girl who was snatched off the street 18 years ago has been found and the man-and-wife team that grabbed her has been arrested and charged with kidnapping and rape, officials said today.

The identity of Jaycee Lee Dugard, now 29, was revealed when she accompanied Phillip Garrido for questioning by his California parole officer. Garrido, a convicted kidnapper, also was accompanied by his wife Nancy and two young children.

Undersheriff Fred Kollar said in a news conference that Jaycee was the mother of the two young children who had been fathered by Garrido.

Jaycee, who Garrido had renamed Allissa, was reunited with her mother Terry Probyn today, and the mother told ABC News that her daughter had been held against her will all these years.

Jaycee had been held captive at a house in Antioch, California, since the day she was abducted and none of their neighbours ever knew.

Entrance to the secret yard was guarded by a 6-foot-tall fence, tall trees and a tarp, he said.

Kollar said Jaycee and the two children lived a series of sheds, including one that was soundproofed and that could only be opened from the outside.

ABC NEWS

- Underline the verbs in passive voice.
- Rewrite the sentences in negative and interrogative form